Editor's Window

Last Tuesday night, when the stalwart candidates met the voters of the Carmel Unified School District at Carmel High School, three thunderous statements were made. Two represented a glorious confusion of metaphores.

Each candidate spoke in turn, and Roxanna Blanks exercised the lady's prerogative, remaining seated while speaking. Another candidate, speaking in turn shortly thereafter, said, "I think that I will follow in Mrs. Blanks' footsteps and remain seated." And then, there was the candidate who said, "We shall have to do some soul-searching and look under a few rocks."

The third ringing statement was made by the candidate who commenced his remarks by saying, "Education in Carmel is at the crossroads."

This fellow's metaphors were not mixed but his concept of what constitutes a critical decision was.

Education is always at a crossroads. Each decision made by student, teacher, administrator and trustee has a special significance. Such a dramatic crossroads as the man may have had in mind is usually perceived only in retrospect, when we have gone so far down one route or the other that turning back is not only unimaginable, it is impossible.

Some people have an instinctive as well as a critical capacity for judgment. Considering how beguiling and how compelling certain choices can appear to be, we need people whose attitudes and instincts do not sense a crisis at every turn. The formula for discovering such a person is unknown. Every election in every political campaign proves this.

There is good currency in the candidates who present themselves to the voters in the two elections. Perhaps a certain apprehension may be felt about some one or two, but there is nothing sinister, nothing despot, nothing trivial. Therefore, on the basis of selecting those whose good balance, whose humanity and whose judgment has been amply demonstrated in the past — irrespective of what they may or may not have said in the fervent and slightly dishevelled heat of campaigning — I have determined to recommend to you the following candidates in each election.

Robinson Out Of School Board Contest

Richard H. Robinson, a teacher of botany and biology at Monterey Peninsula College, who has been a candidate in next Tuesday's election to choose three trustees for the Carmel Unified School District Board, announced yesterday his withdrawal from the race.

He has been appointed a Fellow in Botany by the National Science Foundation, and will spend the summer at Oklahoma State College pursuing a study of grasses. Other awards may follow, and (Continued on Page Seventeen)

THE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY OF THE FABLED ASTON MARTIN is being celebrated this year in commemoration of the first car built by Lionel Martin, 1913. This prestigious marque has produced one of the most durable reputations in all motor-dom, and the Aston Martin Owners Club, Ltd., will present a special selection of different models at Saturday's Concours at Pebble Beach.

Qualifications For School Board Membership

Next Tuesday, a minority of the registered voters of the Carmel Unified School District and the Monterey Peninsula College District will elect members of the respective boards of Trustees. It is ironic that the minority will rule for the majority, the eighty per cent or more who will stay away from the polls. Perhaps the only circumstance which will prevent this from being a dangerous condition is the fact that the approximate twenty per cent who vote are by and large thoughtful and earnest people.

Many, of course, have already made up their minds for whom they shall vote. Others are still pondering the statements, reputations and support of the candidates. Both should give some thought about the standard and patterns against which they measure the candidate.

Delta Kappa Gamma, the National Honor Society for Women in Education, through the Delta Lambda chapter of Chi State, has issued a statement of its opinion on qualifications for school board membership. The California Teachers Association, a potent lobby for the professional teacher, has also stated its suggested qualifications.

The Pine Cone herewith presents a synthesis of both statements, noting in passing that they are at times contradictory:

REASON FOR CANDIDACY: A genuine concern for schools and young people; willing to give the time necessary and work objectively for education; not motivated by self-interest or the interest of any special groups; one who will not be a disrupting and detrimental influence.

CHARACTER: Unquestioned integrity, enjoying community respect, ethically and morally suitable.

Feathers ... From the Shaft

By the Fletcher

There are people known as heroes, and a few as only zeroes, and some are famed for altruistic trends; but the person I most treasure in an understanding measure, is the one who's truly loyal to his friends.

This world is much encumbered with too many who are numbered with the traitors and betrayers of their trust. And I cannot quote initials but a country town's officials are often an unmitigated bust.

They may go to church on Sunday, but they're in there pitching Monday, and I don't exclude those higher up the dome. For I feel it nauseating to find dirt in legislating by the representatives of folks at home.

But at least there's consolation in the final postulation; though they calculate they're having quite a ball. While they keep it largely legal, there is something far more lethal — it's themselves they have to live with after all.

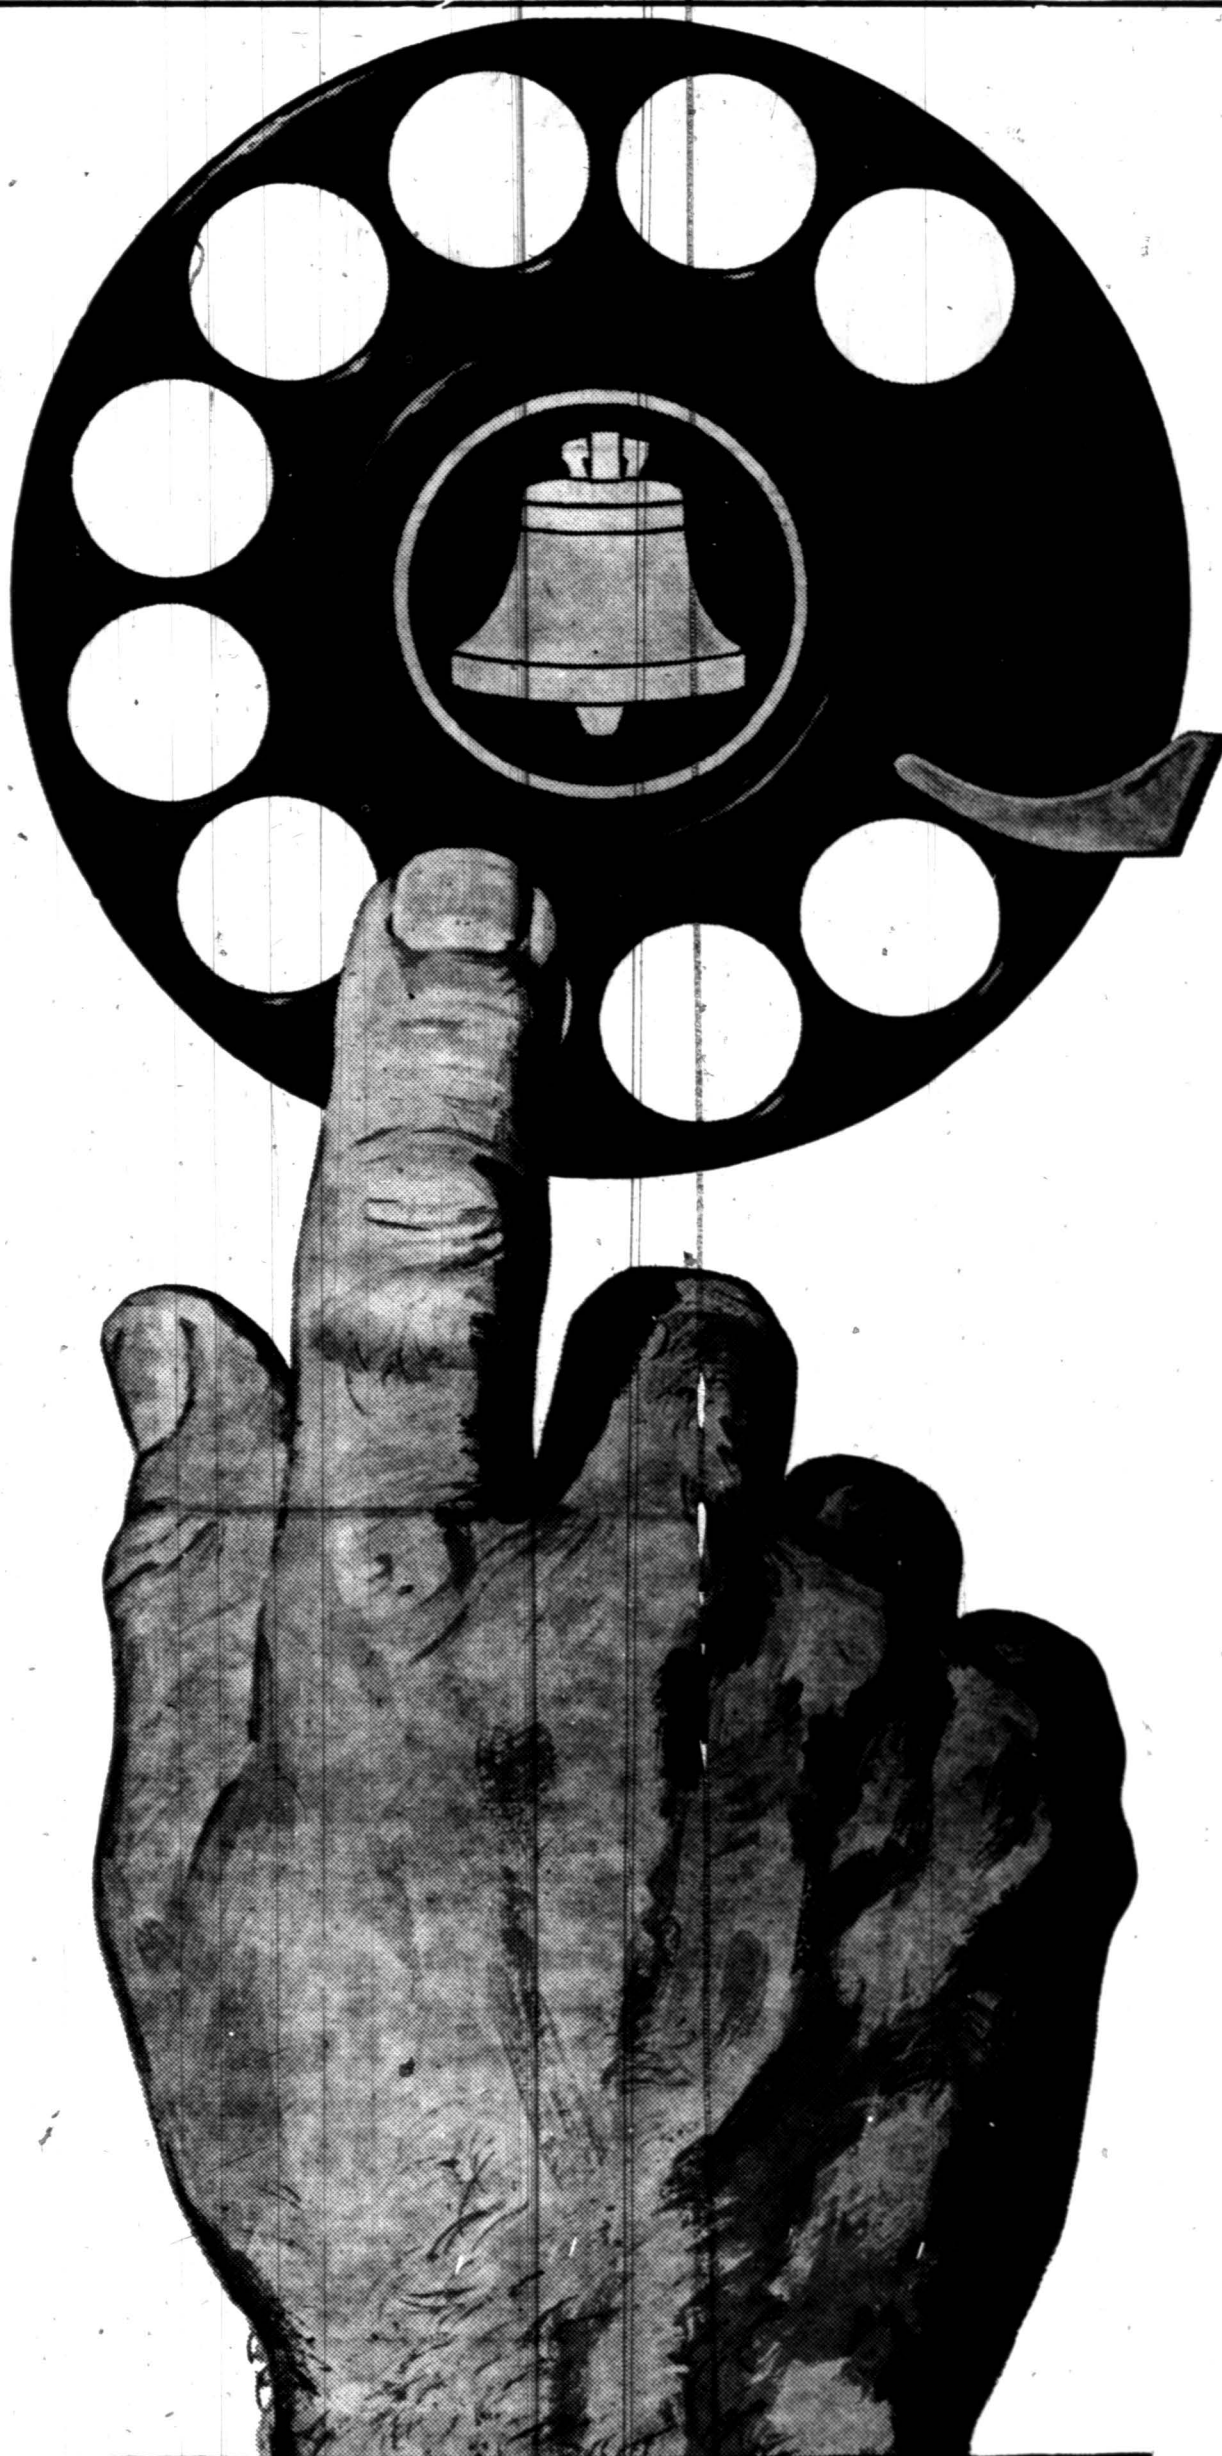

Historic Annexation Now Complete

A history-making annexation was officially completed yesterday. Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan has issued his certificate of annexation dated the 10th day of April, 1963. It should be received by the City Clerk's office tomorrow.

Although other annexations have occurred in the past, never have they involved people. For the first time since incorporation, therefore, Carmel's population has been increased by political act.

To be sure, no explosion will occur as the result of the annexation. Precisely two families, seven persons, have become a part of the city: Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. Grant and their children, John Hackbarth, 18; Pat Grant, five; and Bob Grant, two, and in the second of the two homes annexed, Barbara Kynaston and her sister, Elizabeth. To these people belongs the distinction of an historical "first."

Said Elizabeth Kynaston yesterday, "We are so happy to become a part of what is going on in Carmel. Perhaps it will lead the way for others, for I think that many, (Continued on Page Seventeen)

NOW! DIAL YOUR OWN LONG DISTANCE PHONE CALLS!

If you're a resident on the Monterey peninsula, Direct Distance Dialing has placed more than 80 million telephones at your fingertips! To make a Long Distance call first dial "1", then the Area Code, if needed, plus the number of the person you're calling.

For example, to call 626-7399 in Los Angeles, dial "1", then the Area Code "213" followed by "626-7399". After the Operator has asked for the number of the phone you're using, your call will go straight through. It's fast, it's easy, and being station-to-station, it's economical. Give it a whirl. Now you can dial those friends in Fresno, San Diego, Detroit! You'll find a list of places you can call with their Area Codes in the new DDD booklet we've sent you.

Land Sale Racket

Concerned with mounting federal evidence that the number of cases involving fraudulent sale of land by mail has "snowballed," William A. Farner, president of the Carmel Board of Realtors, has repeated earlier warnings about purchasing property sight unseen.

Mr. Farner recommended one of two steps before a person signs an agreement to buy land: personally inspect the property yourself; employ independent real estate counsel to analyze values.

The National Association of Real Estate Boards, of which Mr. Farner and the Carmel Board of Realtors are members, was one of the first to express concern about the number of offers by mail, newspapers, television, or radio to sell relatively undeveloped land to persons who rely upon the representations made without actually viewing the property.

"What is particularly disquieting about these land con-men," said Mr. Farner, "is that they prey on the pensions and life savings of our senior citizens."

"And what makes their approach especially insidious is that their advertisements are based on the traditional American desire of almost everyone to own a piece of property, a good and healthy attitude."

Basically, the land-mail fraud scheme works something like this:

A man buys cheap, often useless property at very low prices. Then, in extensive advertising, he uses glowing, inaccurate descriptions. Essential facts are omitted, and he resells lots by mail at prices 90 to 100 times their value.

Phrases such as "a short drive away" can often mean a two-hour trip. "Exquisite surroundings" in one case meant a jungle.

Taxes

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. yesterday paid its final installments on its 1962-63 property tax assessment totaling $78,628,615. Of this enormous sum, $2,991 will go to the City of Carmel.

In other local tax matters, the City received $48,117.01 from the quarterly sales tax return for the period from 6 November, 1962, to 5 February of this year, almost a 5% increase over the corresponding period of last year.

POLITICS

Talcott Visits

Congressman Burt L. Talcott, returning to his district during the Easter Congressional recess to confer with his constituents, will be honored at a public reception sponsored by the Republican Women's Clubs of the Monterey Peninsula at the President's House, Mark Thomas Inn, from 4 to 7 p.m., on Wednesday, 17 April. Co-chairmen Tom Hudson and George Walker have also arranged for Talcott to speak to a realtors' breakfast at 8:00 a.m. and the Monterey Kiwanis Club at noon. His subject will be "Progress of Federal Legislation in the 88th Congress."

Talcott will also make several visits in Carmel on this date.

Individuals or groups wishing to confer with Talcott between the hours of 10:30 a.m. and 12 noon on the 17th should call his Salinas office (HA 4-6447) for appointments.

EVENTS

Festival Tickets

The Carmel Bach Festival of 1963 has officially raised its baton! Ten thousand brochures containing the schedule, program, names of soloists for the 1963 Season—19-28 July, as well as a separate ticket application, are in the mail. Prices for season tickets are $30.00, $24.00, and $15.00, depending on location, entitling the holder to the six traditional concerts including a Sunday matinee performance of "The Passion According to St. John." Lectures, recitals and Monteverdi's "Vespers of 1610," and "Magnificat," to be given at the Carmel Mission Basilica, are not included in the season ticket, and must be purchased separately in advance. (However, a season ticket for recitals and lectures is available for those who wish to take advantage of this convenience.)

The deadline date for season tickets is 1 May. All ticket orders, until 1 June, when the Bach Festival headquarters box office officially opens, are handled by mail only. Mail orders may be sent to Carmel Bach Festival, Box 503, Carmel.

The Carmel Bach Festival is a non-profit organization devoted to the happy presentation and perpetuation of baroque music.

GOVERNMENT

Fire Training

Two members of Carmel Volunteer Fire Department have recently returned from a week spent in what is sometimes jestingly referred to as the "gay" southland, Los Angeles. The men were taking special training at Los Angeles Fire Department headquarters.

Lee McGukin and Paul Artellan report that they were met at the airport by the arson squad and then the hectic life commenced. Called each morning at 6:45 a.m., they had to be dressed, fed, shaved and ready to roll by seven o'clock. (Bob Smith, please note.)

Housed at headquarters, the local fire laddies took an intensive course in fire suppression, arson detective work, and the various techniques needed to handle all types of infernos.

That they were really busy and not looking at the bright lights of Hollywood is attested to by Chief Bob Smith who once, in the same

CAREERS AT SEA: THE COLORFUL CHALLENGE

California Maritime Academy

To all young men interested in enrolling at the California Maritime Academy, Vallejo, California, the academy is conducting an entrance examination at Palo Alto High School on Saturday, at 9:00 a.m. and requires approximately 4½ hours to complete. No fees, appointments or prior arrangements are necessary to take the test. Only one examination may be taken each year.

Candidates eligible for admission to the California Maritime Academy must be high school graduates or prospective graduates by June, 1963. They must be not less than 17 years of age and under 22 at the date of entrance, 12 August, 1963. Candidates must never have been married and, be found to be physically fit and of good moral character. Young men who are interested in seeking admission to the academy may have college entrance examination board transcripts sent to the academy for evaluation. Selection of candidates for admission is competitive.

The academy offers a three year program of studies and practical training designed to prepare graduates to obtain licenses as merchant marine officers. Students may select training requisite to ship command or marine engineering. Upon completion of school and licensing, graduates are awarded the bachelor of science degree in either nautical science or marine engineering. Graduates are also eligible for commissions in the United States Naval Reserve if selected and found physically qualified.

U.S. Coast Guard Academy

The 88th annual examination for admission to the U.S. Coast Guard Academy at New London, Connecticut, described by President Kennedy as "second to none of its sister academies" will be held 7 December, 1963, in over 1,000 cities of the United States, its possessions and selected cities abroad.

Appointments as cadet, United States Coast Guard, are made solely on the basis of competitive examination and prospective adaptability to military life. There are no Congressional appointments or geographical quotas.

An applicant must be a high school senior or graduate, who has reached his 17th but not his 22nd birthday by 1 July, 1964. Applicants still in high school must graduate and earn 15 units by 30 June, 1964. The units must include three in English, two in Algebra and one in Plane Geometry. Applicants must be in excellent physical condition, between 64 and 78 inches in height, with proportionate weight, and have at least 20/30 vision in each eye, correctable to 20/20.

The academy curriculum includes academic and military training. Courses are conducted in engineering, the humanities and subjects related to the professional duties of a Coast Guard officer. Cadets are also schooled in the fundamentals of atomic science through the use of a nuclear reactor on the academy grounds.

During their training, cadets are paid $1,333.80 per year.

Upon completion of the academy education, cadets are commissioned as Ensigns in the Coast Guard and awarded bachelor of science degrees.

Coast Guard cadets spend a portion of each summer at sea, training aboard the bark EAGLE and major cutters. Past training cruises have taken the cadets to such interesting ports of call as Oslo, London, Copenhagen, Lisbon, and Antwerp.

The Coast Guard is a military service and is one of the five armed forces. While history finds the Coast Guard fighting in all of our wars with many recorded deeds of valor, traditionally the service takes its greatest pride in peacetime activities. Search and rescue, law enforcement, aids to navigation, merchant marine safety, boating safety, ocean weather stations, international ice patrol, and many other duties provide aid and comfort to people of all nations using the air or sea lanes. Its duties are truly humanitarian and it is the successful performance of their jobs that gives real satisfaction to Coast Guardsmen everywhere.

For the academy graduate, post-graduate education is available in such fields as business administration, communications, civil engineering, electronics, oceanography, naval construction, and marine engineering. Post-graduate courses are conducted at advanced military schools and leading universities and colleges throughout the country.

CAMBODIA

At the Monterey Public Library, Rita Stein, Carmel resident and artist, is showing a group of watercolors and oils painted while she, her husband (now a student at the Army Language School), and two small sons were living in Phnom Penh, Cambodia.

The artist grew up in Washington, D.C., where she studied at the Corcoran School of Art, American University, and the Washington Workshop. Before leaving Cambodia she had a one-man show in Phnom Penh. Her Monterey show, entitled "Cambodian Sketchbook," will be on view at the library until 17 April.

YACHTING

Stillwater Regatta

During the Easter vacation yachting springs to life at the Stillwater Cove Yacht Club at Pebble Beach, climaxing with the first annual Easter El Toro Regatta on Sunday.

Especially arranged for the junior skippers under 16 years old, Stillwater Yacht Club commodore Harvey Kilpatrick informs us also that Don Geisen will be on deck to assist and supervise activities between the hours of 10:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m. through Sunday, the day of the event.

All of last year's skippers are asked to enter and to enlist as many new recruits as possible.

The El Toros are a large and popular class with 4,000 registered throughout the world and more than 2,900 in the United States. Oakland's Lake Merritt has the largest fleet, 65 showing up regularly for the starting gun.

The El Toros dinghy had a salty origin, entered the sailing scene when a group from Richmond Yacht Club got together to design a yacht tender that would also sail. The first hull was built in a night school boating class. It was named after the many "bull" sessions it took to come up with a final drawing and the shovel insignia naturally became irresistible.

BASEBALLThe Kids Need Help

Boys' baseball, as usual at this time every year, is wallowing in the inertia of parental indifference, according to Frank Timmins, who further declared that parental supervision is needed to get the Pony and Connie Mack leagues off the ground.

This is nothing to be buried under the conscience-soothing contribution of a few dollars. . . . These kids need help to get the show on the road.

Umpires, for instance, are vitally needed as are other officials. The kids have fun, and so does everyone else in attendance, but without parental participation the thing will degenerate into sand lot, uncontrolled chaos, which is not the idea at all.

So call Frank Timmins at MA 4-4134 and go on record with an offer to help.

GUNS4-Time Champ

At the 92nd annual meeting of the National Rifle Association, in Washington, D.C., Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance awarded Gary L. Anderson, 24-year-old divinity student of Axtell, Nebraska, the Army's New International Distinguished Marksmanship Medal for his feat in capturing four world championships in individual competition at Cairo, Egypt. Young Anderson broke three world records in taking the honors and is the first American in years to tie or beat the Russians in this type of competition.

Of the seven world's records broken at Cairo, four were in individual events and Anderson accounted for three, records previously held by shooters of the Soviet Union or shared by them with shooters of other nations.

Anderson also won the World Smallbore Rifle championship at Cairo with a record-breaking score of 1157 out of a possible 1200. During the standing phase of this match he set a new world record with the .22 calibre rifle by scoring 376 out of a possible 400.

The truly remarkable thing about Gary Anderson is that he is the first American to come along in a decade who could even come close to the Europeans in this class of competition. They have literally wiped us out every time we have tried to buck up against them.

Now a student at Hastings College in Nebraska, the new shooting phenom who flashed across Egyptian skies is, of all things, studying for the Presbyterian ministry.

The Fraud of Pro Golfing Rules

By JACK MORRIS

The U.S. Golf Association and the Professional Golfers Association are in accord that a uniform set of golf rules should be used. It is mighty big of the PGA to agree to this type of thinking, when they wrote their own rules in the first place to fool the public into thinking that every man on the tour was a low-scoring golfer. Proportionately, there are just as many hackers on the pro tour as there are at the average country club.

A Gentle Fraud

When these paid entertainers are forced to abide by the rules of golf as set down by the joint rules committee of the USGA and the Royal and Ancient, they do not score any better than Jones and Hagen and "By" Nelson back in the '20's and '30's. In the recent Crosby, under near perfect playing conditions, Casper, the winner, played excellently to score 285 for the 72 holes, three under par for a course that was playing short and fast.

Overhead conditions were good and it was dry under foot, yet some of the scores were in the eighties and nineties. One "pro" golfer (the term is used for lack of a better one) managed to run up an astronomical total of 19 on the easy tenth hole, mostly because he was faced with a situation that called for clear thinking and some knowledge of the basic playing rules.

The great Palmer was disqualified on Sunday for a rule broken on Saturday. Dave Hill, probably disgruntled at his own poor play, waited until the final scores were posted before making his "sportsmanlike" gesture in reporting the breach. Palmer was not cheating. He was merely confused between a basic playing rule and the PGA interpretation of same.

Gentleman's Game

Golf was originally a gentlemen's game. The rules of golf were formulated by gentlemen as a code to govern scoring. It was the assumption that all who played would lean over backward to be fair. This is a very different attitude from that of the PGA, who play winter rules on many of the courses on the tour because they are "not in good condition." This is a fallacy. A course is at all times playable, although not always in sub-par figures.

The PGA has departed from the original playing rules and it is up to them to get back in line. They are responsible for the stupid play of the amateur of today who creeps, crawls and shambles around the course in what he fondly believes is a professional manner. Actually he does not know what the hell he is doing, and neither does the average pro on the tour, who is out there because he thinks it is a fast way to an easy buck. He really has no feeling for the game as such and if it were not for the prevalence of electric carts today, he would be carrying clubs instead of swinging them.

Cry-Baby

A famous incident which occurred at Cypress Point in one of the past Crosby events illustrates the "cry-baby" attitude and desires for preferred treatment of the modern playing pro. Cary Middlecoff came screeching in to Peter Hay at the club house claiming that the wind made the course unplayable. "Why, I can't keep my ball on the tee," he beefed.

Peter looked down at him with momentary contempt.

"There is nothing in the rules of golf that states you must tee up your ball in order to start a hole," he roared. "Now get back out there and finish the round or I'll disqualify you." The good doctor crept away muttering under his breath. Secretly he was probably ashamed, if only for the moment.

THE AMERICAN MISTAKE— The Decline of Downtown

In a recent issue of "The Listener, a publication of the British Broadcasting System, W. G. McClelland, a managing director of a chain of supermarkets and self-service shops, and a research fellow at Balliol College, Oxford, speaks of supermarket planning and operation.

He has several surprising — to the accepted American way of thinking — observations, particularly respecting the number of supermarkets in a shopping center, the orientation of such complexes to pedestrians, and the influence of centers on established downtown business districts.

The following is an excerpt from his papers:

In the last few years supermarkets have emerged as a fast-growing new form of retailing in Britain. They have already made a powerful impact, both on the housewife and on their more traditional competitors, and it is clear that within the next ten or twenty years they will dominate food distribution. But we still have not really made up our minds about them. On the one hand we are attracted — by the low prices, the brightness and cleanliness, the variety, and the convenience of one-stop shopping. On the other hand we suspect sharp practice, and regret the loss of the personal touch and the impending demise of the corner shop.

I think we must make up our minds about this, because we cannot have it both ways. One might say that the old retail pattern served both an economic and a social function. The two can no longer be combined, so we have to decide either to subsidize economic inefficiency in order to preserve the social function, or to take advantage of more efficient methods and find other ways of satisfying people's needs. There are other ways, of course: in the United States, where they no longer have the corner shop, they are still great on getting together; they do it in coffee-parties and parent-teacher association meetings and so on. The family's food shopping is disposed of in less than an hour once a week or once a fortnight, and the man who ran the corner shop is earning better money in shorter hours in a factory.

This is the trend here, too; I think it is irresistible, so we might as well welcome it and make the best of it. Once we have overcome our nostalgia for the cosy but inefficient small shop, we can think out what really pleasant and efficient shopping would mean. This means, looking not just at supermarkets but at whole shopping centres. What would your ideal shopping centre be like?

First, an important centre must be able to satisfy almost all your requirements. This means it must have not only two or three competing supermarkets but a variety store for small non-food items, a shop with clothing and household goods and furniture and home appliances, a snack bar and a few small specialty shops such as hairdressers, jewellers, and so on. Secondly, you must be able to walk between any of these shops under cover and in a matter of minutes, and without the dirt, noise, and danger of traffic. This means that they should be planned as a unit and not mixed up with other buildings such as offices, in which you are not interested. Thirdly, the centre as a whole must be easy to get at. This means being near a main road, with ample room for parking cars; and it also means — at least for the next ten or twenty years in this country — that public transport must take you right to it if you have no car.

Planned Shopping Centres

Except for the last point, this is more or less a description of what the best of the American planned shopping centres are trying to provide. Town planners here are getting round to some of those ideas, but anyone who is in touch with what is happening on the other side of the Atlantic can hardly be satisfied with the progress that is being made. Such people think the shopping centres planned are still too many, too small; they think the shops planned in each centre are still too many and too small; they think the demand for car-parking space is being consistently underestimated; and they think that, while we must at all costs avoid the American mistake of letting the city centres die, we could reduce the pressure on them by encouraging the development of a few large shopping centres at key points on the outskirts and in the suburbs.

Let us not be too hard on the town planners. Some of them grasped, before most retailers, the need for pedestrian precincts, where the shopper, while never far from motor transport, could shop free from the worry of traffic. They have insisted that every new shop must have rear access for the delivery of goods and in this connection have come up with some exciting schemes using more than one level. And nowadays almost every new suburban scheme makes provision for one or two units large enough for supermarkets. But there is still not only an underestimate of the need for car parks, but all sorts of quibbling about who shall stand the cost of them. Wherever shops and other public uses are grouped together, car parks ought to be common, not private; and properly approached retailers would contribute their share of the cost although they may well think they do so already through the rates. But it seems wrong to me that planning permission for building alterations or extensions or change of use should be tied to the condition that so much car park is provided.

Admittedly the problems are tremendous. Car parks adequate now will be inadequate in five years' time; car parks that would be adequate in five years' time will be under-used now. And how can we save existing central shopping streets, with all the investment they represent? Left as they are now, they will not be able to compete with new centres which offer the overwhelmingly more agreeable facility of traffic-free shopping; if that happens, town-centre shops will become uneconomic and town-centre rateable values will plummet. But to save them means either closing them to traffic, which would require the provision of alternative routes and parking space nearby in valuable and heavily built-over land; or creating a pedestrian network at first-floor level, which would require substantial alterations by the shopkeepers.

Carrying Goods to the Customer's Car

Another problem in saving existing town centres is that of getting goods that are too heavy to carry to the car parks surrounding the shopping centres. With the planned shopping centres in the United States, all on one level, not as big or diffuse as those of our larger towns, the supermarket's shopping-carts can be used for the short distance to the customer's car. Even there some supermarkets have built an underground conveyor belt to a 'pick-up' point at the exit to the car park. This device ought to be looked at seriously by those who are engaged in trying to save the central areas of our larger towns. You could go on a shopping expedition, buying at various shops, and your purchases would be waiting for you in exchange for a tally as you left the car park.

Letters . . . to The Editor

FAREWELL, FRANCIS

Dear Sir:

A friend of mine is leaving town. A very simple statement often repeated by many people. This time it carries much more significance, because he is not only a friend of mine, but, a friend of all Carmel, and those who truly love her.

This friend has stood for many things, some of which many have not favored. However, even during the times that we have disagreed with him, we have admired his courage, his honesty, his integrity, his high purpose and his unflinching devotion to his ideals.

And here we come to the crux of his departure: His ideals. He thought — and I'm reasonably sure that the community thought — that "principle" mattered more than "principal;" that our superb natural beauty should be enhanced and preserved; that our architecture be kept comparable with the rustic charm of the community; and that our people be of good character and ethics and have a true understanding of those things that have made Carmel into a charming and hospitable place to live.

Of course, I need not tell you of whom I speak, for well we know where our friend, Francis Whitaker, has stood through the years.

So it is with the deepest respect and regret that I write about the departure from our midst of a fine and good man, whose loss will be felt for many years to come and whose presence will be sorely missed.

So, I bid good bye and the best of everything to this stalwart man. I feel the loss most keenly.

Sincerely,

C. Wellington Merrifield

Dear Sir:

Our attention has been called to an article appearing in the 7 March, 1963, issue of the Carmel Pine Cone concerning our Congressman, Burt Talcott, which could have been misinterpreted by some of your readers to be in his disfavor.

Although this was probably not your intention, we sincerely hope that any future writings about Mr. Talcott shall give the public a true picture of his competency and ability.

We trust that there will be better understanding and cooperation in any future news coverage of Mr. Talcott.

Very truly yours,
The Executive Committee,

(Editor's Comment: It will be Congressman Talcott, not the Carmel Pine Cone, who will give the public a true picture of his competency and ability. I have no doubt that such a picture will be impressive.)

I happen to have considerable respect for Burt as a man and as a statesman. Believe it or not.)

WE SEE THE LIGHT

Dear Larry:

I am sorry about the confusion concerning some lights on a fire truck. So that there will be no misunderstanding, I am sending you a copy of Senate Bill 357 introduced by Senator Backstrand on January 25, 1961, relating to the general problem of lights on emergency vehicles.

The bill I sponsored during the same session was one introduced at the request of the Humane Society permitting the use of amber lights on publicly or privately owned vehicles used for picking up injured animals or loose livestock, or in other potentially dan-

TRUCK PARKING

The Law Disagrees

As an aftermath of the series of articles which the Pine Cone has been running regarding the double-parking of trucks on Carmel streets, Police Chief Clyde Klaumann was this week blamed by an indignant lady for being the cause of her failure to pass a driver's license examination.

"I was taking my driver's test at the Department of Motor Vehicles in Monterey and one of the questions read . . . 'Is it illegal for a motor vehicle to double park?' I answered yes, it was illegal, except for trucks. Hmmmph! I read your piece in the paper about not tagging trucks and now you made me get a zero on that question!"

She wagged a finger at the poor chief. "Now, you just put a piece in the paper that you were wrong. The test examiner says so. So there."

The chief heaved a short miserable sigh.

"Lady," he said, as softly as possible, "Let me just call them up, because I know that I am right."

He called and got one of the DMV office staff on the phone. After a terse explanation of the situation he was informed that trucks were illegally parked when they doubled up. But the chief was just as insistent, explaining that what the man said was true enough, but only up to a point.

Klaumann then read a section of the Motor Vehicle Code which definitely stated that the parking did not apply to trucks.

Klaumann also argued the point with Newell Smith, Division Superintendent, who was in the DMV office at the time. "Call Chief Simpson in Monterey, Clyde. He's been all through this before," Smith suggested.

Klaumann did.
"Boy, did we have trouble. We still have trouble, except now it doesn't bother us so much because we can do nothing about it. We just let them alone. We had an exhaustive legislative survey made and discovered that it is not illegal for a commercial vehicle to double park while the driver is delivering merchandise."

Klaumann then called Smith, who was waiting to hear at the Department of Motor Vehicles.

"I see. I see," said Mr. Smith. "But the conflicting clauses make the whole subject rather controversial. What are you going to do about it?"

"Hah!" said the triumphant Klaumann. "I'm going to ask this lady to go right back over there and retake the examination. And this time, no zeros, eh, Mr. Smith?"

The controversy points up the contradictions which frequently creep into the vast body of the law. In this case, one section says that all vehicles must park at the curb, except commercial vehicles when loading or unloading merchandise.

The other section, upon which the lady founded in the examination, says quite as absolutely that no motor vehicle (no exception) may double park.

This is not a matter of law enforcement. It is a matter of legislative tidiness, one which Senator Farr and Assemblyman Pattee might be interested in examining.

Three Years to the Top
H. H. Van Loan has now reached the point where a story bearing his name brings a price of $5,000 and a percentage of the profits. He no longer has to 'peddle' his manuscripts, for producers come to him to buy stories before they are written.

Three years ago he broke away from his job as a newspaper reporter in New York City, with a capital of only numerous plots and ideas gleaned from his ten years of experience in that work. Screen producer Thomas Ince finally interviewed him and thereafter his fortune was made.

"I don't see why more fiction writers do not go into the moving picture game. There is much more money in it. Last year I made $35,000."

Companion of "RLS" Dead
Donat, who spun weird tales of the native lore of the South Sea Islands for his friend, Robert Louis Stevenson, is dead.

Stevenson would sit by the hour and listen to the tales of ghosts as told by Donat; tales of how, on a certain night each year, ghosts of the natives of the long ago would gather in the Haamuta valley to sing and dance to the music of ancient flutes.

Stevenson's great, black eyes would glisten with excitement while he listened, Donat once said. Speaking of Stevenson, Donat said, "Ah, that was a fine man; so kind, so gentle, so gracious to everybody. He was a true democrat."

Donat, in relating to a correspondent the life led by Stevenson at Fakarava, painted an intimate word picture of the noted author. Stevenson, he said, would ramble along the beach and through the coconut groves, clad only in pajamas, barefooted and a great woven pandanus leaf hat on his head. He held kindly intercourse with the natives, whom he compared with the gods of Greece, and each evening celebrated the close of a happy day with a bottle of champagne.

DANTE RE MEETS ACCIDENTAL DEATH

One of the well-known characters of these parts for many years, Dante Re, a Swiss, was killed last Saturday by being run over by his own motor truck. He had cranked the machine and jumped on the seat, but fell off and under the front wheels, the truck passing over his body.

For some years, Dante and his brother, Giacinto, farmed in San Jose canyon, down the coast, then for a couple of years were employed by the city.

Dante was a good-natured, hard-working young fellow, the butt of many a jibe because of his name. He will be missed.

STREET IMPROVEMENT

Nearly completed this week is a street improvement project on Third Avenue, between Mission and Junipero, which has reduced the grade and lowered the crest of the street at the highest point by approximately two and one-half feet. Equipment operator BILL AGEE is shown above with the City's new Michigan loader engaged in the grading operations, which required three days to complete.

BOB PARKHURST and other street department personnel are pictured during the spreading of base material on the newly-contoured street, which required over 200 yards of decomposed granite. A finish of plant mix will be applied to the surface. During the course of work a 100-foot rock retaining wall was installed on the north side of Third. The project was a cooperative undertaking, with adjoining property owners paying for the materials, the city providing equipment, personnel and engineering. Street superintendent WILLIAM ASKEW has estimated the cash outlay for the project at approximately $1,600. By private contract it probably would have bid out at about $40,000.

CONCOURS d'ELEGANCE

With the Concours d'Elegance to be held Saturday, 13 April, on the lawn fronting Del Monte Lodge, a record list of entries is in the making.

A panel of 18 judges has been selected to handle the 18 classes to be viewed between 11:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m. with Frank O'Neal, cartoonist from Carmel Valley, on hand to add the local touch.

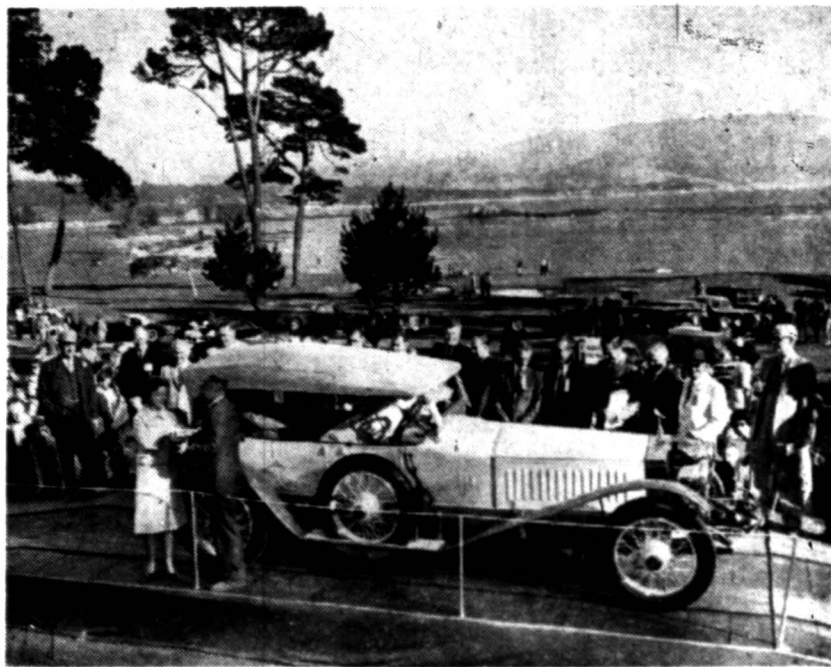

Talbot Kendall of Ripon has the largest number of entries including the bullet proof Rolls Royce built for Eva Peron who used it to attend the coronation of Queen Elizabeth where she was doubtless disappointed in not being used as a target in order to show off her new car. Mr. Kendall is also showing a Renault runabout of 1908 vintage, a 1928 Bentley Town Car without Chauffeur, and two other Rolls Royces of special interest. Although all Rolls Royces should be of special interest. The Rolls is one of the few real status symbols left in this hurly-burly world.

Scott Newhall, San Francisco newspaper fella, a former overall winner of the Concours, will be one of the judges along with Frank Beach, who might be termed "Mr. Concours" for his contribution to this specialized showing.

William Harrah of Reno, who sinks some of his chips into blue chip cars, will have a 1931 Pierce Arrow in competition, but the 1931 Bugatti "Baby Royale" should attract more than its share of attention. This baby is owned by Dr. Milton Roth of Long Beach.

However, an entry that could be the star of the show—a real sleeper—is a 1963 Apollo-Buick Sports Coupe owned by John Palmer Howard, which is the offspring of the first marriage between Italian coachwork and an American production car engine. This combination will bear close scrutiny as it could be the fore-

No free loaders at this lawn picnic. No complimentary tickets. The one dollar gate fee goes to help finance the Peninsula Community Hospital Auxiliary who are offering a gate prize of a $2500 diamond pin donated by Laykin et Cie, to tempt a few more dollars through the gate.

A panel of 18 judges will handle the large entry this year, including distinguished Lucius Beebe; Peter De Paolo, twice National AAA Auto Racing Champion, winner of the famous Indianapolis 500-mile race in 1925, the first Indianapolis winner to average better than 100 miles per hour.

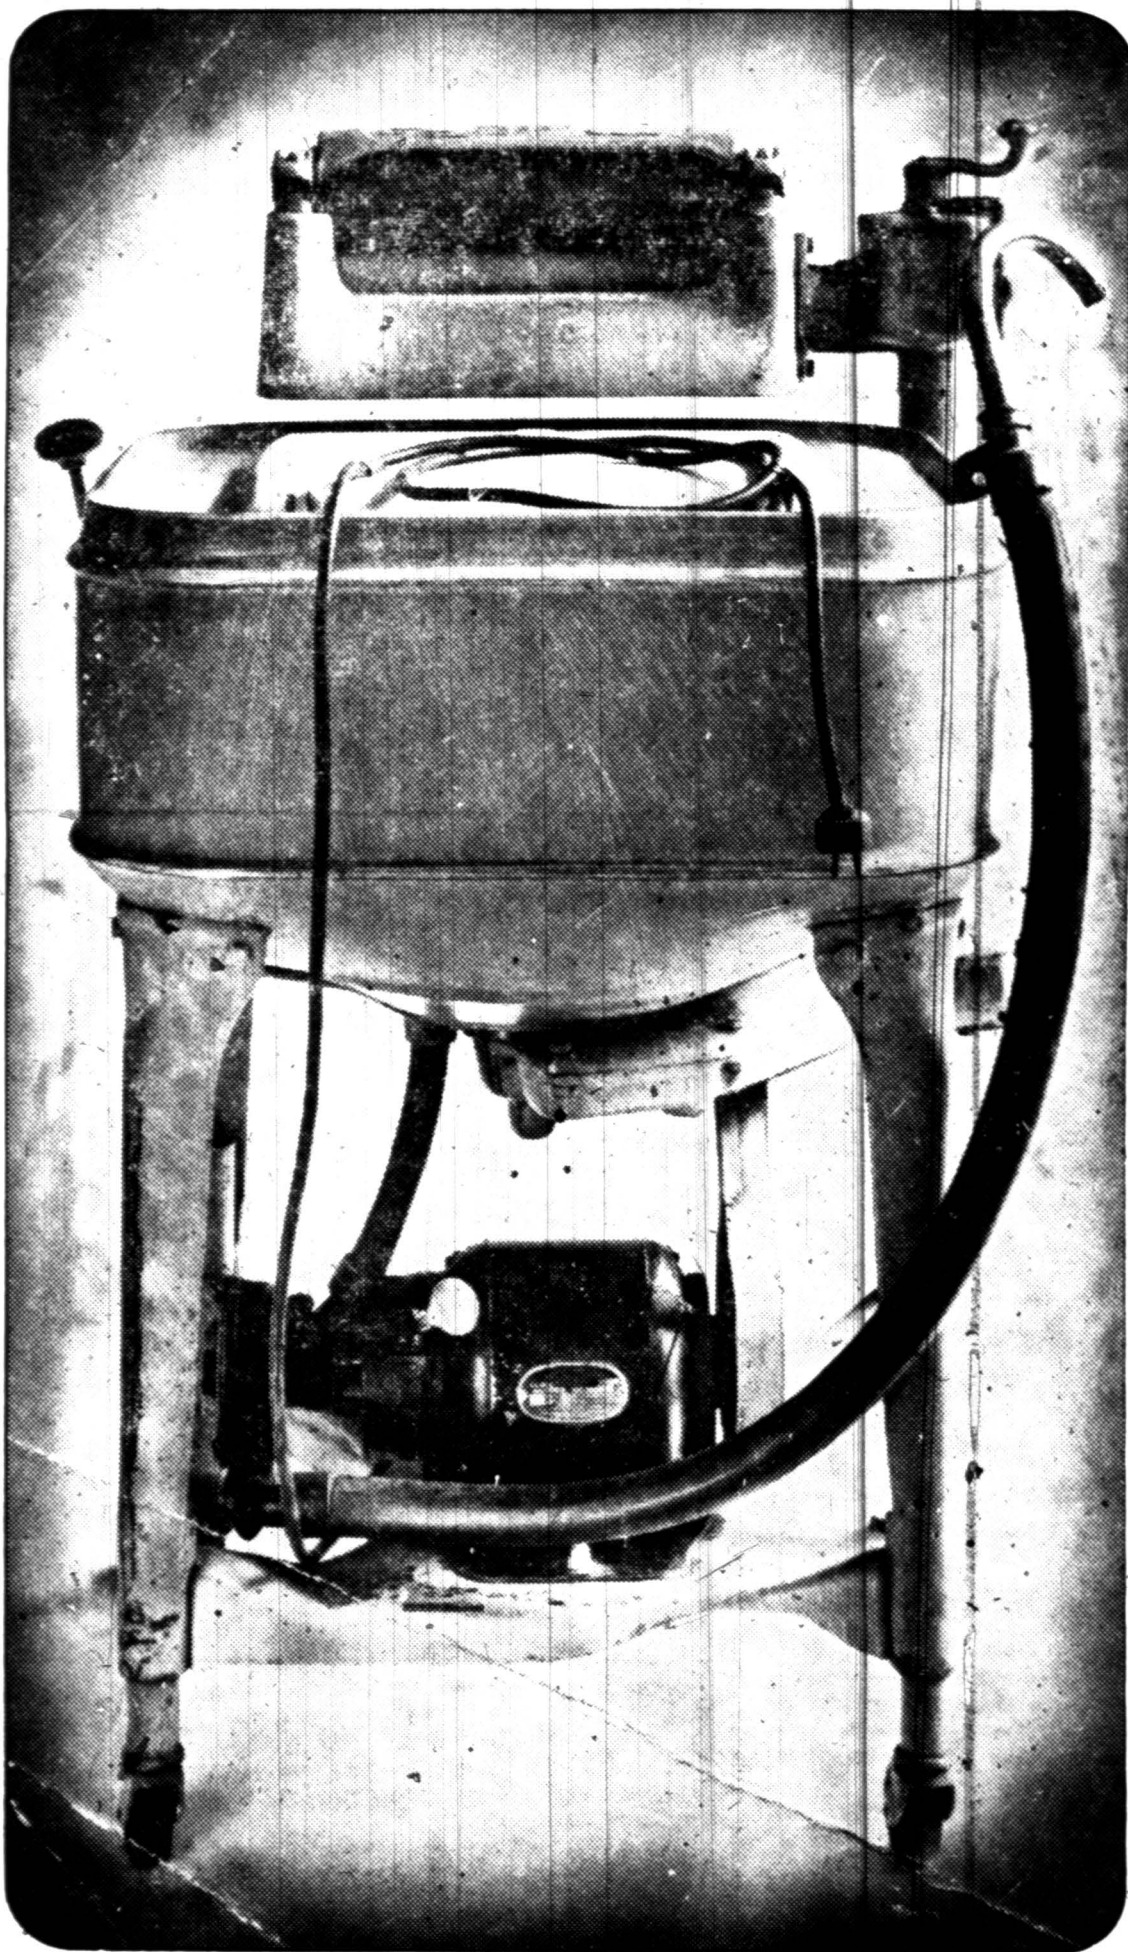

Other judges are car authorities Charles G. Anderson, Los Angeles, owner and restorer of early American and British automobiles; Overton A. Phillips of South San Gabriel, knowledgeable on Bugattis and restorer of classic cars; Jack B. Nethercutt, Los Angeles, a noted collector;

James Rowland Lowe, San Francisco, former regional and national executive of the Sports Car Club of America, owner and driver of racing cars and other fine automobiles; Jack L. Bradley, Santa Ana, electronics executive; Robert A. Day, Los Angeles, veteran Concours judge, who possesses a large collection of both vintage and modern cars;

William B. David, San Francisco industrial designer, a former regional executive of the Sports Car Club of America; Denholm D. McKie, San Francisco Sports Car Club of America member and Concours judge of long experience; Hermann A. Richardson, prominent San Francisco industrial designer; Peter A. B. Bancroft, San Francisco, Rolls Royce authority; Frank E. O'Neal, Carmel Valley, cartoonist ("Short Ribs"), a sports car owner for many years; Frank Mason, Long Beach, winner of the Strother MacMinn Perpetual Concours d'Elegance trophy awarded for his outstanding contribution to the sport, also an automobile columnist; Strother MacMinn, prominent Los Angeles designer; Scott Newhall, San Francisco newspaper executive and former overall winner of the Pebble Beach Concours d'Elegance;

Lloyd A. Laflin, Palm Springs, collector; Barry Wagner, San Francisco sports car owner and racer.

What did washers have in 1933 that they don't have today?

Answer: They had higher-priced power . . . because PG&E prices are 8% lower today* than 30 years ago. (So how come your bill is bigger now? Just because you're using more and better appliances these days.)

"THE SOUND OF MURDER"

By William Fairchild

Directed by Charles Thomas

THE STUDIO RESTAURANT AND THEATRE

Friday, Saturday, Sunday; 8:30 p.m.

(Buffet dinner served from 6:30 to 7:30)

THE CAST

Charles Norbury Errol Allan
 Anne Norbury Marcia Hovick
 Miss Forbes Barbara Clarkson
 Peter Merriott Sid Frohman
 Inspector Davidson Robert Lauritzen
 Constable Nash Jerry Caris

I sometimes wonder what considerations inspire a director to choose a certain play for production. Frequently, of course, he is merely dipping into the standard dramatic repertoire, relying upon the proven appeal of the play's popularity and prestige.

Occasionally, an actor of known or suspected talent comes to hand, and the director will seek out a vehicle to exploit or illuminate his aptitude.

And then, there is the innovator, the experimenter, the explorer, who seeks new expressions in the theatre, fresh approaches, untried contexts and unusual idioms. His is perhaps the most hazardous adventure; certainly it is the most ambitious.

But what of the director who evidently is not inspired by any of these considerations? Why, so often, does he select a trite play for an unsuitable or limited cast? (That is almost a fatuous question: eliminating the first three inspirations, only the last one is possible.)

It is absurd to call such a choice a deliberate act; therefore, it must be accidental. If this conclusion is correct, such an accident is the current production at the Studio Theatre, and the casualties are severe.

"The Sound of Murder" is pretty awful. It is a trivial play, almost ridiculously ingenuous, containing practically all of the fatiguing clichés of murder mysteries — an evil husband, a jealous secretary, conspiring lovers, leers, startled glances, screams, crashing thunder and flashing lightning, jangling telephones, screams, fiendish chuckles, surprise endings and deathless lines, such as, "Then, if you love me, come away with me now."

And, the acting is not very good.

But perhaps, upon reflection, I should say that the acting is altogether marvelous, because everybody keeps a straight face as they wander woodenly through the ordeal, without laughing at the remarkable things they are required to say from time to time.

The set is quite good. The flats do not flutter or shudder when the door is slammed — something which happens often during the interminable proceedings — and the stage is dressed with some inspiration. It is a pleasure to congratulate Ruth Jordan Allan, the designer.

The management would be well advised to get this misfortune off the stage at once, before their reputation, that of director Charles Thomas (Oh, Charlie, how could you?), and the self-respect of several talented actors — particularly Barbara Clarkson and Marcia Hovick — is shattered.

The only thing more anguishing than "The Sound of Murder" is the sight of it. —L.R.

New Circle Play

On 19 April, "The Tenth Man" will give place on the stage of the Circle Theatre to "A Taste of Honey," a play which ranks with "Look Back in Anger" as one of the pioneering works of the new British theatre. The production will be directed by Nick Zanides and designed by Barbara Tripp.

Early in 1958, an 18-year-old girl from Salford, Lancashire, mailed the script of "A Taste of Honey" to avant-garde producer Joan Littlewood with a note saying, "I am sending this play to you for your opinion. Would you please return it to me, as whatever sort of theatrical atrocity it is to you, it means something to me." Miss Littlewood put the play into rehearsal within two weeks. It was later transferred to a West End theatre where it ran for over a year, and then went on to triumphant Broadway and film productions. The author, Shelagh Delaney, has become one of England's most discussed playwrights.

The Circle will be one of the first theatres on the west coast to perform "A Taste of Honey," which deals with characters and situations which until recently might have been considered taboo in polite society. However, Miss Delaney, with the genuine innocence and lively curiosity of youth, looks beyond immorality to find the essential humanity of her characters. Her play emphasizes both the toughness and the tenderness of life as she sees it, without being either sentimental or sensational. Although it is not recommended for children, adults will find it a humorous and appealing account of a young girl learning how to face up to life without help from anyone.

WRITING

MONTEREY PENINSULA COLLEGE

Arnold J. Toynbee made no new nor startling statements in his Monterey Peninsula College lecture on Friday night, but his dispassionate, scholarly approach to contemporary history — he cannot possibly be called "political" — his outlook is from a distant eminence in time — made for a wholly satisfying evening.

He spoke of the historian's view of history, always influenced by the prejudices, mores and ideologies of his day, thus almost never truly objective; by the passage of time, which can falsify events; and by the fragmentary historical evidence of the past.

But Professor Toynbee's telling point, to which he returned again and again, was, in effect, that we are living in an atomic age but still behaving as though we were living in a pre-atomic age.

"This may be the world's greatest miscalculation to date," he quietly stated.

Of the opinion that communism and capitalism are converging toward a middle ground, Professor Toynbee emphasized that Russia and the West must come to some sort of working agreement with each other while there is still time. "Even united, we shall still be in a numerical minority compared to China and the rest of the Far East," he concluded.

—V.M.

By Way of Comparison

A comparison of our contemporary social and industrial development with the conditions described by John Steinbeck two decades ago in such novels as "Cannery Row," has been the assignment of staff writer Marcel Saporta of the avant-garde Paris publication, "Informations et Documents."

Saporta spent five days in this area, which he described as "rich in individuality," under the sponsorship of the U.S. Department of State and the hospitality committee of the World Affairs Council of the Monterey Peninsula.

MUSIC

George London

The Carmel Music Society brought George London to our town last week and we must in all conscience say thank you. How many villages have been so privileged?

London is now one of the seven singing wonders of the world. American born, Brooklyn Heights, he had to find recognition in Vienna. Great voices are a small elite. It is an oddity that of all musical instruments available to man, the vocal one is the most formidable and yet lures ten times more students than the strings, the woodwinds or the brasses.

One of the major delights of London's concert was the beautiful balance of the programming. How many California concert-goers have been subjected to great artists performing old-hat classics on which we were weaned?

London gave us Handel, Schubert lieder, Moussorgsky's Monologue of Boris, Ibert's Don Quichotte sequence, and a choice group of old ballads — a tribute to the musical taste of both artist and audience.

The Handel seemed least successful, perhaps because every artist, in concert or opera, takes time to warm up. The long sustained line, purity of tone, and perfection of timing required are too demanding for an opening group.

The lieder were more successful. (Continued on Page Seventeen)

Engagement Announced

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Johnson of San Jose have announced the engagement of their daughter, Connie Lea Loveday, to Laurance B. Clark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald G. Clark of Carmel, formerly of Portland, Oregon, and Seattle.

Connie attends San Jose State College, and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Sallie Clark, Laurance's sister and a sorority sister of the bride-to-be, made the traditional announcement at the Kappa house in San Jose.

Laurance attended Monterey Peninsula College and the University of Oregon. He is now associated with the Carmel Sport Shop.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Children's Writer Visits

"Children love imagination and I believe they should be given fantasy to read," said Mrs. Eleanor Cameron, well known writer of fantasy fiction for children, in a lecture to the adult education class in Writing for Publication Thursday evening at Carmel High School, as the guest of Mrs. Maxine Shore, instructor.

Mrs. Cameron, whose latest books are "The Wonderful Flight to Mushroom Planet" and "Mysterious Christmas Shell," uses the Big Sur coast with its ocean cliffs and fog, and the Monterey Peninsula generally, as background for most of her work, since she is familiar with it from childhood vacations and annual visits for 30 years. Now a resident of Los Angeles, she frequently visits her mother, Mrs. Florence Warren of Carmel.

Mrs. Cameron came here for a week's visit following a trip to Menlo Park, where "Eleanor Cameron Day" was observed by sixth graders at Ladera School. While here, she spoke to Carmel sixth graders at the Harrison Memorial Library.

Rylanders Have Daughter

Their second child, a daughter named Shireen Ellen, was born to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Rylander on 3 April, at the Community Hospital. Shireen's father is a member of the English department at Carmel High School.

The Rylanders, who lived in Carmel last year, but now make their home in Del Monte Park, also have a son, Danny, who is nearly four. Shireen's and Danny's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alcock of Gonzales, and Mrs. L. C. Rylander of Little Falls, Minnesota.

To Perform A Marriage

Elder Samuel Wood, a resident of Carmel for nearly 30 years "and still in the same house," was driven south by his son-in-law, Frank Bell, Monterey High School teacher, yesterday, to officiate at the marriage of Amelia Anderson, daughter of Mrs. H. K. Anderson of Capistrano Beach. "I'm not much of a reporter," he smilingly replied, when we asked the name of the bridegroom. But we wished him well on his trip.

On U.O.P. Dean's List

Nancy MacAllister of Carmel Highlands, a senior at the University of the Pacific in Stockton, placed on the dean's list for the first semester of the academic year with a grade point average of 3.60.

A graduate of Monterey High School, Nancy is majoring in sociology.

ORGANIZATIONS

The CARMEL JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL PARENTS' CLUB will meet on Tuesday at 7:45 p.m. in the Junior High School cafeteria. Dr. Charles Rosewall, psychiatrist, will moderate a panel discussion of "The Social Development of the Junior High School Student." Chaplain John O'Connor of the Naval Postgraduate School, Carmel Police Chief Clyde Klaumann, and Dr. Walter Klas, Junior High School principal, will be among the panelists.

The annual meeting of the WORLD AFFAIRS COUNCIL of the Monterey Peninsula, 19 April at 8 p.m. in the Carmel High School cafeteria, will be preceded by a dinner at 6:15. Mrs. David Gill, in charge of dinner reservations, asks that they be made not later than Wednesday by telephoning the Misses Augusta or Gwendolyn DeForest, MA 4-6566, or Miss Theo Winfree, MA 4-4893. Topics for next year's lecture series will be selected, and the board of trustees for 1963-1964 will be elected. Dagulf D. Mueller, chairman of the Film Society of Berlin, and member of the film, radio, and television committee of the German Teachers Federation, will show colored slides of Berlin.

A gift of $250 to the Carmel Pony League was approved by the MONTEREY PENINSULA VOLUNTEER SERVICES at their Friday meeting at the USO in Monterey. Among other requests granted was $1,108 to the Monterey Institute for Foreign Studies; $730 to the Council for Gifted Students; an extended amount of $500 to the Boy Scouts; and seven scholarships at $15 each to the World Affairs Council conference at Asilomar on 3-5 May. MPVS wishes to remind Carmelites that used articles for their Thrift Shop may be left at Carmel Foundation Town House, and that they will provide pick-up service, if necessary.

On Wednesday at 3 p.m. at CARMEL FOUNDATION TOWN HOUSE, Mrs. Florence Smith will relate experiences as a Wyoming pioneer which led her to write "Cow Chips n' Cactus." Tea will follow the meeting. Brigadier General A. T. Mason (USMC) will instruct a woodcarving class at Town House on Tuesday mornings. The rug hooking class will now meet on Thursdays, instead of Wednesdays, from 10 a.m. until 2 or 3 p.m.

Mrs. Jerome E. Carlson (Jeanne Salinger Carlson) recently returned from a three-month visit in Mexico with her husband, will be the speaker at a meeting of L'ALLIANCE FRANCAISE of the Monterey Peninsula on Thursday, 18 April, at 8 p.m. at the Carmel Art Association, relating her impressions and observations of Mexico. Anyone who understands French is welcome to attend. Those wishing information may call Mrs. Carlson, president of L'Alliance, MA 4-3195, or either of the two vice-presidents, Mrs. James L. Hathaway, FR 2-1138, or William Cano, MA 4-4653. Following Mrs. Carlson's talk there will be an informal reception, and refreshments will be served.

Where There's Life

By Andre Hope

Looking around our "scatter," as Mr. Stan Delaplane refers to a house (Stan Delaplane? Oh, he's another columnist . . . or should I say he is a columnist and leave us to guess what I am?) I see armloads of flowering apple blossoms, sprays of wild iris, clumps of azaleas artistically disarrayed around hunks of driftwood and a gaggle of camellias. Have you ever tried arranging camellias with pine or redwood branches? Makes an interesting contrast. Somehow, I have a sneaky feeling that Spring has leaped upon us when we weren't looking.

Actually I was sure of this when the birds started getting excessively noisy two hours before it was time to awaken, and Nephthe (a bird of a different plumage) opened. Unfortunately, I was unable to attend the latter, as another harbinger of Spring, a severe case of the "pip," prevented me. However, Roger Hope, a very close relation of mine, and Lorraine Hoffman brought me home a list of those attending, among whom were—artists Fred Klepich, Gus Velletri, Don Bloom, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Emery and Mrs. Margaret Wentworth Owings. Also festiving it up were Mr. and Mrs.

Arnold Bowhay, Burley Farber (of Big Sur Camp Grounds), Francis Whitaker, Eric Barker (possibly my favorite contemporary poet), LaVerne Allen (Coast Gallery, Big Sur) and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Osborne and party. Shive, as his business card announced, was "at the cash register" . . . Absent, due to a stay at the Hilltop Hilton, otherwise known as The Peninsula Community Hospital, was Thad Killar, whose friends will be glad to know that he is now home, and happy to furnish all callers with a brief, diagramed discourse on his operation.

Easter vacation being upon us again, you may just have noticed a plethora of the young and pretty on the streets. This fresh, new time of the year being the special climate of the bright-eyed and busy-tailed and all things washed by dew, perhaps we could declare a sort of moratorium on noticing the blobs and splashes of ice cream on the by-ways, just for this one week. And how shall you celebrate Easter Sunday? After church, that is. We're having a buffet and Easter egg hunt, a family affair in which the parents and the children may compete with each other on their, or rather our, own grounds. Gives the fathers a chance to get even for the upcoming Little League season . . . Menu? Thanks, I will. Broiled young chicken with parsleyed lemon-butter, sherry sauce; creamed hominy in the chafing dish; roast beef rolls with mustard pickles; French country pate (consisting of ham, sausage and pork loin); hot cross buns and brioche; fresh strawberries and pineapple, marinated in Kirsch . . .

For spectacular, but eatable, Easter eggs, spray them with metallic spray and sprinkle with glitter, or paste on little nosegays of artificial flowers . . . And a happy Easter to you and your chick!

The Observance of Easter

PASSOVER AND EASTER

The Jewish holiday, Passover, commemorating the Exodus of the Israelites, as Hebrew slaves from Egypt, is now being observed by Jews all over the world, and began at sundown on Monday.

The holiday is observed for seven days by Reform Jews and for eight days by Orthodox and Conservative Jews. During the first evening families unfold the story of the Exodus at the Seder, a home worship service which includes a festive ritual meal. (The word "seder" means "order.")

This year, Passover and the Christian Easter coincide on the calendar. There is some correlation between the two religious holidays, but there are also many differences.

Moses serves as the central figure in the Passover story found in the Biblical Book of Exodus. The narrative tells of the time when the Israelites fled from the enslavement in Egypt under the tyrannical Pharaoh. The Hebrews were forced to endure bitter hardships at the hands of their oppressors, building pyramids and other monuments out of mortar and stone. Then, after a series of ten plagues, the Egyptian ruler bade Moses to take his people into the desert.

The seder meal and all of the food eaten during Passover are reminders of that struggle for freedom. Best known of the edibles is the matzo eaten during the entire observance of the holiday.

The religious service of Passover is found in a book called the Haggadah. (The word means "telling" the story of the Exodus.) The youngest member of the family asks four traditional questions on why this particular occasion is different from the other days of the Jewish year, why different foods are eaten, and why a special service is held.

The word "Easter" is from "eostre," the Teutonic goddess of spring. At first, the dates of Easter and Passover were the same. Eventually, an attempt was made to split Easter from its Jewish origins, which led to a split of the Eastern and Western churches. The West (Rome) dated Easter from the Vernal Equinox of 21 March. Easter thus became dated from a solar (sun) calendar, and Passover remained connected with a lunar (moon) calendar. The Council of Nicea in the year 325 of the Common Era, decreed that the Christian passover should be celebrated on the first Sunday following the first moon of the Vernal Equinox. This is why they often come together, as is the case in 1963.

Passover and Easter are both redemptive festivals. Easter celebrates the redemption and resurrection of a personality; Passover, the redemption of a people. Both involved great personalities — Moses, who gave the law; Jesus, who in the Easter story is accounted as one who came to fulfill it. Both emphasize freedom — Easter, the freedom of man from the world; Passover, the freeing of man in and for the world. Both deal with the miraculous. In Passover the miracle is the crossing of the Red Sea; Easter commemorates the miracle of resurrection. However, in Passover, the miracle of the crossing of the sea is secondary to the idea of freedom. In Easter, the miracle is of primary significance.

This year, the coincidence of Passover and Easter take added meaning. This is an Ecumenical year, when men of varying faiths and creeds have, for perhaps the first time, extended the hand of friendship and understanding across religious lines. While Easter and Passover are different from one another, together they are the celebration of life's renewing value and the need for the reaffirmation of life's redemptive capacity. Both call for the resurrection of the world's great desire for peace; both see in the liberating spirit of God the salvation of humanity.

(From a report prepared by the commission on Interfaith Activities of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and the Central Conference of American Rabbis.)

EASTER SERVICES

CHURCH OF THE WAYFARER

A Communion service on Maundy Thursday, at 8 p.m., will be conducted at the Church of the Wayfarer by Dr. K. Fillmore Gray, assisted by other ministers. Organist will be Mrs. Connell Carruth, and Mrs. Carl Welchner will be the soprano soloist. The congregation will sing hymns of Evening.

A Good Friday service from 2 to 3 p.m. will include readings from the 16th century Wakefield mystery plays, on the theme of the life and death of Jesus, by Rosamond Zammit and Nick Zandies, with musical selections by the Chapel Singers, under the direction of John Farr. Mrs. Carruth will be at the organ, and Dr. Gray will conduct the service.

Easter Sunday services will be held at 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m. As in 1962, the Chapel Singers will perform "O Sons and Daughters of the King," by Leisring; and at the second and third services will be augmented by the Children's, Youth and Bell choirs in Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," and "O Make Our Hearts to Blossom," by Clokey. Organ selections played by Mrs. Carruth will include "Holy Jesus is Risen From the Dead," by Dupre; a Spanish carol, "In Joseph's Lovely Garden;" and "The Thrush," by Lemarek. Dr. Gray will preach and conduct the service.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

The meaning for today of Christ Jesus' complete triumph over the flesh will be emphasized this Sunday at all Christian Science churches.

Golden Text: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit" (Romans 8:1).

The Bible Lesson is entitled, "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" Related readings include this passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (p. 233): "Every day makes its demands upon us for higher proofs rather than professions of Christian power. These proofs consist solely in the destruction of sin, sickness, and death by the power of Spirit, as Jesus destroyed them."

ALL SAINTS'

Services at All Saints' Episcopal Church will include The Holy Communion at 10:30 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Maundy Thursday; and on Good Friday, the Children's Service at 10 a.m., and The Three Hours, with the Reverend Massey Shepherd, Ph.D., of the Church Divinity School of the Pacific as preacher, from 12 noon to 3 p.m. The Lighting of the Paschal Candle will take place on Easter Eve at 4 p.m., followed by baptism, the Choral Evensong and the children's party.

On Easter Sunday there will be five services, at 7, 8, 9:30 and 11 a.m., and at 5:15 p.m.

SCIENCE AND HEALTH

A paperback edition will be published on 8 May of one of the world's most widely-circulated religious books — "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy.

This is the book that for nearly 70 years has been read along with the Bible at all Christian Science church services, in place of sermons by ministers. Christian Scientists turn to it regularly for explanation of the Bible and religious inspiration.

Although this will be the first paperback edition of Science and Health, the book has already reached sales of several millions since it first appeared in 1875.

The new 700-page paperback, like all other editions of Science and Health, will be published by the trustees under the will of Mary Baker Eddy, in Boston. Printed on standard book paper, it will be priced at $1.95, the publishers have announced. It will be distributed by Harper & Row, Inc., of New York, Evanston and London, to quality bookstores throughout the world; and also by the publishers' agent to Christian Science Reading Rooms.

POSTGRADUATE SCHOOL

Dr. Theodore A. Gill, president of San Francisco Theological Seminary, San Anselmo, will be the guest speaker at two Easter services, 10 and 11 a.m., in the ballroom of the old Monte Hotel at the U.S. Navy Postgraduate School.

The Chapel Choir, under the direction of Mrs. Thomas C. Adams, will sing "The Crucifixion," by Pearl Curran. Soloists will be Mrs. Roger Coffey, alto; Leonard Dickerson, tenor; Lieutenant Al Henry, baritone. Mrs. John Elmore is organist.

Church school classes will be held during both services, and nursery facilities for children six months and older will also be available.

All friends of the Naval Postgraduate School are cordially invited to attend.

CARMEL MISSION BASILICA

Good Friday services will be held at 1 p.m., including Holy Communion. On Saturday at 11 p.m. the Easter Vigil will begin, culminating in the celebration of Solemn High Mass at midnight.

On Easter Sunday, there will be Masses at 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 a.m.; 12:15 and 5 p.m.

Confessions will be heard from 3 to 6 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. on Saturday.

"WILDFLOWER SUNDAY"

Visitors at Mission San Antonio, near Jolon, in Monterey County, on Sunday will be given free packets of flower seeds, including hollyhock, lupine, poppy and snapdragon. These flowers, native to the area, have grown around the historic Mission since it was founded in 1771.

The padres maintain a picnic grove along the river at the rear of the Mission, with a beautiful view of the primitive Santa Lucia mountains which surround the Mission on three sides. Visitors are invited to use the facilities without charge. Travelers who come from some distance may find the 10 o'clock Mass convenient.

The Mission can be reached by turning west off Highway 101 at King City.

What will come of the meeting between the representatives of the USGA and the PGA is problematical. But it strikes a sour note to even feel that a bunch of golf pros are setting themselves up as bigger than the game itself.

George London

(Continued from Page Fourteen) though the accompanist seemed inadequate to the task; his playing was pedestrian, lacking both shading and tone. London sang the "Doppelgaenger" with great feeling; his "Fischerweise" was relaxed and lyrical; but with the last of the group, "Dem Unendlichen," he seemed to open up for the first time and the audience responded in kind.

London's "Monologue of Boris" raises a basic question — the interpretation of the role. One admires enormously the tremendous stage presence, the thorough musicianship; the mathematical precision, the intellectual comprehension. But where is the earthiness, the body-warmth, the barbaric, pagan agony of the great Pinza? Further, London developed a disturbing vibrato, and sharpened consistently beyond what dramatic license might allow. Returning to recordings of Pinza's Boris, one cannot feel the two artists comparable.

There is no question London has total control and total self-discipline — but discipline must be used as a device to give out totally when the role requires.

The Ibert sequence was a delight where both artist and accompanist developed a lovely, melodic, lyrical line. With the "Chanson de la Mort," London was spell-binding; he developed a most delicate pianissimo, and this was a stunner.

Finishing the evening, the singer offered five 17th century ballads of England, Ireland and Scotland. The pearl of these was his "Lord Randal," which sent chills down the spine; if London could do it with Lord Randal, why not, to some degree, with Boris?

In any case, a packed house, a devoted audience — all the coughers and program-rattlers remained at home — and you could have heard a pin drop. Altogether, a fine evening. — M.D.

Robinson Quits

Robinson regretfully foresaw his inability to attend Board meetings and otherwise function as he believed a trustee should.

His announcement concluded with a strong endorsement of Stephen Sassoon and Dr. Richard Snyder, fellow candidates in what had been a six-person contest for three seats.

Of Sassoon and Snyder, Robinson declared, "Though all of the candidates have shown themselves to be articulate and sincere, I believe that the interests of education will be especially well served by Sassoon and Snyder."

Editors Window

(Continued from Page One) ties and the art of the impossible. His occasional extravagances are of the superior kind: he is all out for effective education and can justify (in his own mind) almost any expense directed toward achieving this objective. I can't always agree with this crusader's syndrome, but I admire it and, somewhat paradoxically, conceive the necessity of a little bit of ardent zeal mixed with the pragmatic porridge of our comfortable preconceptions.

"Roxy" Bianks is a fine woman, who has overcome a certain natural reticence. She is most appealing in her troubled sincerity. Furthermore, she appears to be disinclined to compromise her ideals for the sake of expediency. And there's another reason I prefer Roxy's candidacy: she is unencumbered by a lot of the academic sophistries with which educators — amateur and professional — surround themselves.

Steve Sassoon is something quite apart from the other candidates: he has no children. But then, neither did Johannes Brahms, and he wrote the exquisite Lullaby by which countless thousands of children have been tempted into sweet repose. It might not hurt to have somebody on the Board whose thinking is not encumbered by subjective experiences.

Steve has a sound and unruffled approach to most problems. He has worked earnestly on a multitude of community projects, demonstrating poise, mental agility and excellent respect for the treacherous rocks of fanaticism. Furthermore, he is warm, direct and as free from devious deceit as anyone I know. And that is a quality which any well-constituted Board might find a place for.

In the College District I find myself amidst troubled waters. Everybody is denying the fact (and this includes Trustees themselves.) that the faculty wants to take over major functions of the administration, and they mean to get it by destroying the reputation of President Fred Huber and the authority of the Board itself.

Ironically, it is the Board — though not necessarily these same trustees — who are in part responsible for the little expediences during the past several years which have contributed to this shabby state of affairs. In the Carmel election there is no issue; but in this College Board election there is indeed one: who's going to run the campus?

Three seats are being contested by four candidates. Only one candidate, Brooks Lockhart, has indicated that he believes the President and Superintendent of the District should run the show. That's good enough for me. There's a principle involved, not a principal, and I think that the superintendent should be the administrator.

Any game in which the contestants are also the referees, is going to get all fouled up. And teachers, at the college and elsewhere, are lately succumbing to some kind of gross elation when they transgress the academic boundaries — and surely there must be some — to assume a responsibility which constitutionally, ethically and practically belongs to the people, and through them to their elected officials, and from them in the custody of their appointed administrators.

Lockhart has regard for Huber,

Board Qualifications

scious of his responsibilities, who is willing to accept the role of policy-maker rather than administrator; who will avoid commitments, implication of schools in partisan matters; who has health, social poise, tolerance, sincerity, and vision.

EDUCATION: Minimum, a high school diploma. Enough formal education to understand and make wise decisions on school policy, finance, and social phases of education.

OCCUPATION: Demonstrated success in any business or profession, or successful homemaker; preferably a background or experience other than teaching, to fulfill purpose of a lay board.

The statement concludes with the intelligent observation that the makeup of the board is frequently as important as the qualifications of the individual candidates, noting that most effective boards have both men and women; that occupations should vary among the members; and that a fair cross-section of the community should be represented.

California Teachers Association

An intelligent, fair, tactful person with an open mind and an absolute belief in the democratic process and academic freedom makes the ideal school board member.

These prime qualifications were condensed by CTA through a survey of expert opinion, including Thomas W. Braden, president of the State Board of Education.

Candidates who are seeking the position for personal prestige or political gain, who represent a particular cause, or who disregard the jurisdictional power of the board as distinguished from the responsibilities of the administration are to be rejected.

A good board member should have the time and ability to absorb the leading educational research studies, and he should have an absolute belief in academic freedom, particularly on controversial subjects.

The candidate should have a knowledge of world events, a balanced attitude on the importance of academic and vocational education, and a willingness to go to the public for financial support of public education with vigor and enthusiasm.

A qualified member should have a sincere concern for education, have the time and energy, be able to confer and counsel with individuals and citizen groups, maintain a judicial attitude, be free from prejudice and rancor, have the ability to reach sound conclusions, and be possessed of integrity, fairness and competence.

respect for administrative integrity (as distinguished from academic responsibility) and the forthrightness to say so. He also has one other factor in his favor: an organized campaign to elect everybody but him.

He may be defeated. But I like a courageous underdog. Because he is really never defeated.

Thief Nabbed

(Continued from Page One) coins and a brown metal box containing assorted foreign coins, a few U.S. silver dollars and a brown folder of miscellaneous coins. No time could be set for the burglary as the coin collection owner had not been home for several hours. He remembered showing the collection to a friend several weeks before. Entrance could only have been made through a rear unlocked door.

In the orderly process of police business, all local coin collectors were alerted to report any attempted sales and a description of a possible suspect given. As the suspect was under legal age and the victimized coin collector in the same bracket, feelers were placed with several juveniles. It was discovered by this method that a girl friend of the suspect, living at Santa Clara, California, had recently lost, by burglary, 100 45 RPM records. Santa Clara police verified the burglary. It had taken place while the girl and her father were at church.

Within a very few days, while police were checking upon this information, another coin collection was stolen. As the location of this incident was outside the Carmel city limits, the victimized person was advised to call the Sheriff's Sub Station in Monterey, which assigned a man to the case. This sheriff's officer accepted the aid of the Carmel policeman who was working the first coin burglary as both thefts took place in the same vicinity and the coincidence of proximity pointed to the same culprit.

In the second robbery a screwdriver was used on the door and on a locked cabinet. The suspect had also seen this collection and was familiar with the storage location. It was further discovered that an oval wicker laundry basket and several unrelated items of clothing were missing. The suspect had been seen sitting in his car in the vicinity on the same day and routine inquiry established that he did not attend school in the afternoon.

Although not assigned to the case, all officers are kept informed as to progress and keep up on all details. So it was not sheer luck that an off-duty Carmel police officer noted the suspect's car traveling north on Highway No. 1 about five miles south of Carmel. He had a male companion of about the same age riding with him.

At 4:15 p.m. of the same day, the wife of the victim in the second theft reported to the Carmel Station that a resident of Palo Colorado Canyon had telephoned her that some small children had found a basket of clothing and the remains of some coin collection books in a creek bed. The men assigned to the case immediately went down to check, and in going over the contents discovered a bank statement with the victim's name and address, thereby identifying the basket and contents as being connected with the case. Upon inspection, the victim recognized all items except one pillow slip. The plastic coin containers were carefully handled for later checking by a fingerprint man. The pillow slip was then taken to a laundry and the laundry mark showed the name of the owner as that of the suspect's family.

During questioning, the suspect gave the name of his companion, the hiding place of the loot, admitted the first coin collection robbery and also the Santa Clara job. They had sold a few coins, he further stated, but used a good many just as "money" with no regard of the value to the collector. They had planned to dig up the balance of the coin books which had been hidden under a log in the region of Garrapata Creek bridge and to take them out of town for sale to a coin shop. With the coin collection from the first burglary priced close to $1,000, the boys are to appear in Juvenile Court.

In this case described by the police department as "routine," one can easily see that it is the sum total of good police training, recognized coincidence, hard work, and constant observation. In addition, knowing what questions to ask for proper results when the quarry was at last run to earth. A good job.

Annexation

Said Mrs. Grant: "I have felt that our family needs the additional fire and police protection. But more than anything else, we wish to take part in the civic activities in Carmel."

In the meanwhile, a foul-up may delay final closing of the file of the proceedings. The City Clerk's office says that copies of records of the proceedings were mailed on the 9th to the County Clerk's office. He, in turn, is supposed to acknowledge receipt. At a late hour today, nobody in either the Clerk's or the County Recorder's office can seem to find any record of receiving the papers.

EASTER SERENDIPITY

"Serendipity" is the aptitude for making fortunate discoveries, and we've been gathering together these goodies just for the Easter week:

ARCHITECT'S STUDIO AND HOME combination very close to the Village. You must see it to realize its potential for residence use or home and income combination. Ask Mark Goldes about it.

A BUG'S EAR is what our vacation-house special is cute as! Also a perfect full time home for two, and only two blocks from the beach. Carpeting throughout, contemporary decor inside, traditional charm outside, and only $22,500. Helen Ireland has the key.

ACROSS THE STREET FROM THE SEA we have an expensive two bedroom home with a spectacular and different ocean view from each and every window. Intime, perfect, for those who can afford the very best. See it!

CARMEL'S ONLY CONDOMINIUM has only a very few units left. Let us show you the advantages of really care-free living in Carmel, with a view and near town, for the price of an ordinary house.

WE NEED A FAMILY WITH a mother-in-law or a pampered housekeeper or married children or a yen for income along with their home, because we have a stunning new home of 3,000 square feet looking right down on the ocean. $35,000 loan can be assumed, price $44,500, and it has everything, including 4 bedrooms, 3 baths.

PEBBLE BEACH ADDRESS — $24,500. Fresh 2 bedroom charmer in a lovely neighborhood and set in a beautiful garden. At this price, it's a "must see" for the bargain seeker in this area.

FRESH, SWEET, PORTRAIT-PRETTY. A turquoise love in Carmel's sun belt. 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, carpeted, draped, papered and paneled, grand-piano-size living room, central heat, heavy shake roof, garage. Top terms on the low $27,500 price.

SEEKING SERENITY? Then lift up your eyes to the enchanting Santa Lucias, and you can see them from most every window of a 3 bedroom, 2 bath home waiting to love a new family in Soth Carmel Hills. Price $39,800.

FOR PRIVACY LOVERS, and those in search of peace we can offer serene and quiet living at the end of a lane where every window presents a mural of the mountains and every room is tastefully and quietly decorated. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths, dining room, den, double garage, every up-to-date appliance, and only $37,500.

90,000 SQUARE FEET OF RIVER plus 2.7 acres of meadows, woods, birds, butterflies and peace in abundance: that's what this building site in Carmel Valley has to offer for $20,000.

SITES FOR CONNOISSEURS, such as a knoll with a 360° view of the ocean on some of the most striking scenery in the world down the coast. Other coastal sites available, too. Consult Mark Goldes, our expert on the Highlands and the coast south.

IF YOU DON'T FIND IT HERE, remember we have serendipity in our office and can find it for you. And if you'd like a map, stop in. They're free.
